which brought Herman Rosenthal to his death, that the gambler might tell no tales, is today being hourly brought closer to the "police system." William Shapiro, part owner of the "murder car," is giving the public prosecutor information bit by bit which strengthens the belief that the slayer of Rosenthal did not spring from the enmity of a gamblers' clique. Shapiro admits that when his motor car was engaged he was told that policemen had knowledge tected, it is said many thousands of copies of the full statement, which would

What Rose told Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty makes the police official quite anxious to know more The persons accused of a keeper and friend of Rosenthal. Rose dropped in on Webber, but later it appears that Webber turned up at the Hotel Metropole just before Rosenthal was shot and there shook hands with the gambler. Webber also was seen at the hotel after the shooting.

Police Lieut. Becker has been told remain at police headquarters, and one was more surprised at the unquarters yesterday than Becker, the head of the so-called "strong arm" squad which has been engaged in looking after gambling houses. Shapiro is willing to tell more of the circumstances that led up to the shooting of Rosenthal, but he will not tell them to Shapiro, through his counsel, admits that he is in a bad situation, and hopes that he will be dealt with leniently if he tells all he knows of the murderers and the killing. He is willing to take his chances with the district attorney, but he won't talk to the police.

"Big Jack" Zelig Implicated. For the first time the name of "Big
